F.A.Q & Corrections

2-Biding and sculpture of the moais.

- The chief cannot sculpt more than one moai during the auction phase of a given turn, but the moai sculpted can be of size 1, 2 or 3.
- A player does NOT have to bid tribe markers during the auction (i.e. bidding zero marker is OK).
- Moais not attributed to players at the end of the auction phase are returned to the stock, they are not discarded.
- Even if several rounds of bidding are needed during an auction phase to decide which player chooses the moais first, the winning player is always determined the same way: first by the number of Tribe markers, if there is a tie, by the number of Rongo half-tablets, and if there is still a tie, by the Turn order.

3-Placement of transporter figurines and playing the sorcerer's action

- The sorcerer cannot use himself the wooden logs he has just generated in the same turn.

4-Transportation/marketing of the moais and headdresses

- If one transports a size 3 moai using 2 workers and a chief (of a different color), one cannot give a transportation point to each worker and the chief. It is the chief who earns 3 transportation points (one cannot use 'part' of the chief). The same situation applies if wooden logs are present instead of workers: the chief earns 3 transportation points.
- During the transportation phase, there is no limit to the number of moais/headdresses that can be transported by the same chain of figurines. Any player may transport several moais/headdresses on the same figurines.
- At the end of a transportation phase, there can be several moais and/or headdresses on the same hexagon.
- A moai or headdress on a hexagon do not block the passage for other moais/headdresses through this hexagon.
- The player who takes possession of an abandoned moai/headdress is not always the first player in the turn, the next players may take possession of the moai/headdress if the previous player did not do it.
- One may erect a moai on any ahu (that wasn't reserved by another player). It is not necessary to reserve an ahu to erect a moai on it.

5-End of turn and changing of the first player

- Wooden logs are discarded at the end of each transportation phase, whether they were used or not to transport moais/headdresses.

Rule Change : For the final scoring, complete Rongo tablets are no longer scored and do not earn any points to the players.
